Africa is undergoing a significant healthcare transformation, driven by limited access to medical services and an aging, growing population, which increases healthcare demand. Conversely, Central Europe has emerged as a promising market for medical devices, with export potential continuing to rise. Malaysia is now looking forward to tapping into the opportunities presented by both regions, aiming to strengthen its export performance for condoms and catheters, while continuing to build on the success of its glove products.

MRC is excited to invite industry members to the upcoming seminar "Market for Rubber Medical Devices in Central Europe and Africa" for valuable insights into rubber medical devices in Poland, Romania, Austria, Hungary, and key African countries. Discover their market size, consumption patterns, and procurement practices for surgical gloves, examination gloves, condoms, and Foley catheters. Don't miss this chance to identify potential buyers and strengthen your position in this significant sector.
